Next Time (a meditation on ancestral memories) wading into reflections immersed in the roar of the crowd free Cathy walked toward the center of the earth lowered her torch to the still waters ignited a running ring the fire dance surrounded her please do not let them burn her logic said they left her a way to escape they won’t burn her she’s their only Aboriginal symbol pioneer and champion reason replied they burn symbols have incinerated pioneers may sacrifice champions do not let them burn her she would make such a glowing sacrifice consecrate the games fire their spirits purify the hemorrhaging history of Down Under’s new world order so brave her grace in silent running waves all around her

do not let them burn her a sly miracle woman she escaped the burning stepped clear of the ring leaving the fire this time and faced the arena where the crowd waited for the games to begin

[won first prize, Detroit Writers Guild, 2002]

The Journal of Pan African Studies, vol.4, no.1, November 2010
Written for the Late Oscar Grant [Fruitvale BART station, Oakland CA, January 1, 2009]

my country 'tis of thee sweet land of liberty of thee I sing

did you know before today a bullet fired in disdain, callous indifference into a young father's back as he lies face down on harsh cement will power through, race through his body prone bounce off the pavement cold and splash back into vital organs like the heart and spirit and soul, leaving no room for compromise, exploration or forgiveness and no time to say goodbye to his beautiful baby daughter?

but you know now...

of thee I sing

[for Oscar Grant]

(c) 2009 Jeanne Powell

Jeanne Powell (http://jeanne-powell.com, http://redroom.com/author/jeanne-powell) is a poet and short story writer, who teaches in a summer program for teens. Her most recent books are "My Own Silence" and "Word Dancing," available online and through booksellers. She also hosts spoken word events in San Francisco, and covers cultural happenings for online media.

The Journal of Pan African Studies, vol.4, no.1, November 2010